Furniture has been an important product of North Carolina artisans and manufacturers since the early colonial era ^[8]. The massive success of the industry in the state led to North Carolina's acquiring the nickname "Furniture Capital of the World" ^[9] during the 1980s, when the state produced approximately one-half of the furniture sold in the United States. While furniture remained a key segment of North Carolina's economy in the early years of the twenty-first century, with more than 600 furniture manufacturers in the state producing in excess of $6 billion in furniture and furnishings and employing nearly 70,000 people, economic and international trade changes in the 1990s and early 2000s resulted in a significant downsizing ^[10] of the industry.
